Physicians sent their throat and lung patients toward the tropics. Now they send them northward—to the mountains up among the pines. Sufferers from throat and lung trouble experience a wonderful sense of relief in the fragrant atmosphere of a pine country.

Santa Abie

is prepared from Abietine Balsam, obtained from a rare species of pine found only in California and Norway, and from Yerba Santa, better known as Mountain Balm. Soothing, healing and restorative, Santa Abie is a valuable remedy for coughs, colds, croup, asthma, bronchitis and all other diseases of like character. Easy to take, quick in its effects. Every bottle guaranteed.

A Terrible Habit.
"Were you ever troubled with the thought while you walked along some street," said Charles Ebent, "that somehow you ought not to step on the cracks that separate the flagstones of the pavement or the boards of the walk?" "I have been the—well, then it is. That is the meanest habit to form. Cigarette smoking is bad, and cigars are even worse. Tobacco chewing is abominable and drinking is killing, but the crack dodging habit is the worst of all. If I could extricate myself from this miserable feeling that possesses me when I walk along the streets for one of those habits—providing I didn't possess all of them already—I would do it instantly."

"I will start out of a morning for a pleasant stroll, just to see the beauty of nature, and unconsciously I will be led to step over all cracks. Then I will accidentally step on one, and all my protective pleasure is gone—simply dispelled and driven away by that one miserable thought of utter uselessness that I have stepped on a crack. I have suffered for home of a nightime fairly tired and conscious of duties well done, proposing to enjoy a long, sound sleep. Again I fall into the desire to avoid stepping on those miserable partition lines.

"If I succeed in avoiding all of them, I rest beautifully, but if not then I go home and have a restless, nervous sleep in which there is no satisfaction whatever. Of all the diabolical mental inventions that go to break up a man's happiness and peace of mind this one mental status of avoiding cracks is the most consummate that any evil genius could afflict a man with."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Sandwich Islanders and their like. When a Kanaka feels a bit out of sorts he imagines that he has not been diligent enough in his devotions to some particular god. He immediately procures a bunch of awa or something in the nature of a comforting drink, and after a short prayer to his mountain or river deity he murmurs apologetically, "Here's your food" or "Here's your drink," as the case may be. Then he devours the solids or liquids himself. If the Kanaka's health improves, the god is appeased. If sickness still creeps over him, he turns to the Kahuna. One of the guild is immediately hunted up and approached with a bunch of awa or a pig. Then the Kahuna dilates upon his infirmities, and the Kahuna begins preparing to drive out the sickness or the evil spirit.

The patient is stripped and laid flat, and with a bunch of it leaves the Kahuna rubs him all over, murmuring meaningless words the while. If the Kahuna gets well, the Kahuna's influence is increased. If the Kahuna dies, he was a doomed man anyhow, and the Kahuna did his best. Such of the Kanakas as patronize a Kahuna nowadays do it covertly, and the Kahunas keep under cover.—Honolulu Cor. Chicago Tribune.

Why People Like Book Agents.
"What is there about a book agent or a peddler of any kind that is so distasteful to the ordinary citizen of this country?" said Martin Cole. "The efforts of these people to make a living are conscientious, and I am positive there is no work on the face of the earth that is half so wearisome or soul trying as this one of canvassing books. There is no satisfaction in it and not even a good living. Every one turns with disgust from the book agent. Probably it is because people cannot brook anything outside of the regular lines of trade. They prefer to have things in their proper places—books in a book store, candy in a candy store and the like throughout the long list of earthly articles that we use. Then they want the stores closed at hand, so that they can just run in and secure what they want, paying spot cash for it."

"These are what people term the legitimate lines of trade, and they are. Then when a peddler arrives, the merchant or the ordinary citizen immediately figures out that anything that must be brought about to him to effect a sale must not be good. It is outside the legitimate line, and if it were good it would simply be placed upon the market through the ordinary channels and left for the public to conceive its merits. So, then, I figure out that this dissatisfaction with book agents and the like resolves itself into the great law of order, which is an innate desire in the heart of everyone."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Pigs Feet and Terrapin.

A observing business man, who has had occasion to patronize at one time or another nearly every restaurant in the purely commercial section of the city, has discovered an odd relationship between two articles of diet which rarely, if ever occur singly upon a bill of fare.

"You can be reasonably sure," he said the other day, "that when you see liver and bacon set down among the edibles you will not have to look far to discover that you can also obtain a 'chicken liver omelet.' Perhaps this will explain," he added cynically, "why it is that so often the liver of the first dish disappears in small triangular pieces in the omelets."

The gentleman might have transferred his observations also to certain up town restaurants which enter to the "swell" members of society. It's dollars to doughnuts that in at least one-half of those which boast of their fine cooking, whenever terrapin à la Maryland or Philadelphia or any other style is to be had, it will require but little urging to obtain fried pigs' feet.

Pigs' feet and diamond back terrapin do not closely resemble one another in their natural state, but what a difference when they are stewed, either separately or together, with Madeira wine and various concomitants! An epicure only can detect the subterfuge by the slightly larger bones of the pig's trotters.—New York Herald.

THE FINANCIAL QUESTION.

The New York Times, which, like the metropolitan press generally, advocates the single standard and opposes every measure that is favorable to silver, desired to get the views of the members of the fifty-third congress on the financial question. Representative Newlands received yesterday a dispatch from the Times on the subject. This dispatch, which is designed to prejudge those to whom it is addressed, states that it is the opinion of prominent financiers that if the Sherman law is repealed the stringency in the money market will be immediately relieved by a flow of cheap money from Europe. Mr. Newlands, who has learned by experience that the metropolitan press of New York garble the statements of silver men sent by telegraph, tells the Times that he will answer its argument and question if afforded a column of space in which to give his views. It is to be hoped that the Times will accept this generous offer, as a column article from a staunch silver man on the financial question will give its readers new light and much valuable information on the greatest political question of the day.

The single standard advocates are endeavoring to create the impression that the Sherman or bullion purchase act is the cause of the financial distress in the east and that its repeal would make money more abundant by changing the flow of gold to instead of from the United States. The fallacy of this argument is apparent to every person of ordinary intelligence. If European gold comes to the United States in any considerable amount it will be for investment. As paper money, silver, treasury notes and greenbacks, are legal tender they serve all the purposes of gold in business transactions, consequently investors from the other side of the Atlantic are not deterred from doing so by the Sherman act. They well know that there are better opportunities for investment when money is scarce, as it now is, than if there were more of it in circulation. It is therefore improbable that the repeal of the Sherman act would cause a flow of cheap money from London to the United States, but it is highly probable that it would make money scarcer, as the monthly issue of about $1,000,000 in treasury notes, now issued in payment of silver bullion, would cease and the coining of silver dollars is already suspended.

WILL THE SHERMAN LAW BE REPEALED?

The question now agitating political and financial circles in the East, outside of the Ohio Republican State Convention, which, it seems, had not heard of the silver issue, is whether the Sherman Act of July, 1890, will be repealed. Congressman Tracy of New York, who is an avowed anti-silverite, in fact a regular goldbug, said a day or two ago, after a visit to the White House that the Sherman law will be repealed at the extra session of Congress next fall without any compromise with the silver men. A bill for the repeal of the act of Congress, will have a large majority in the House of Representatives, and there are forty-five senators who will vote for it. He thinks any attempt to substitute the Bland act for the Sherman act will be defeated.

Senator Jones of Arkansas, who is now in Washington, does not agree with Representative Tracy. He says the Senate will not repeal the Sherman act unless some other measure looking to free coinage is substituted. He is opposed to the Sherman law, and spoke and voted against it, but he will not vote for its repeal unless some other legislation is enacted favorable to silver. Senator Stewart does not think the repeal of the Sherman law possible unless a compromise is made with the silver men. He believes there is a decisive majority in the Senate against the repeal of the act unless a substitute law more favorable to silver is enacted. On the contrary, Senator Quay of Pennsylvania is of the opinion that the Sherman Act will be repealed without any compromise with the silver men.

The assertion of Congressman Tracy, who is supposed to be very near the President and will probably be the administrative mouthpiece in the House, creates the impression that a thorough canvass of the members of Congress had been made by administration leaders, and that a majority will vote for the repeal of the Sherman act unconditionally.

As a bill to repeal the Sherman law will doubtless be among the very first introduced when Congress meets in August or September, the fate of silver in the Fifty-third Congress will probably be determined before snow flies next fall.

FOURTH-CLASS POSTMASTERS.

Washington dispatches give the relative number of fourth-class postmasters appointed during the first three months of Harrison's and Cleveland's administrations. From March 3d to June 3d under the present administration there were 6,837 postmasters appointed, of whom 4,672 were to fill vacancies caused by death, removals and resignations. During the corresponding period of Harrison's administration the total number of appointments was 8,226, or 1,386 more than were made in the last three months. Of the appointments made under Harrison, 2,659 were to fill vacancies caused by death and resignations and 5,567 caused by removals. The number of appointments made to fill vacancies caused by death and resignations was therefore 2,013 greater during the first quarter of Cleveland's administration than for the corresponding period of Harrison's and the number of removals made under Harrison in the first quarter of his administration was 3,702 more than under Cleveland.

This statement shows that more postmasters resigned since Cleveland took office last March than in the same length of time after Harrison was inaugurated and that more than twice as many were removed during the first three months of Harrison's administration as have been under Cleveland.

Princess Eulalia's Movements.

Special to the JOURNAL.

CHICAGO, June 10.—It rained hard, the wind blew in all directions, and the air was raw and chilly. But such weather had no terrors for princess Eulalia. She went to the fair, and despite the white caps on the lake went in a small steam yacht, the tossing about of which terrified the landsmen who accompanied her. The party went to midway Plaisance, and there lunched in the German village, rye bread and sausages, cheese and beer comprising the repast. About 4 o'clock the princess was reminded of the musicale to be given in her honor at Festival Hall. This did not seem to suit her fancy, but she consented to go. Invitations had been sent out to a large number to attend the concert given by president and Mrs. Haganbotham and Mrs. Bertha H. Palmer in honor of the Princess. The orchestra was practically half through the fifth number of the programme when the princess entered.

An Oregon Bank Failure.

Special to the JOURNAL.

CORVALLIS (Ore.), June 10.—The private bank of Hamilton Job and Co. failed to open its doors for business this morning. Job and Co. expect to pay depositors in full as soon as the assets can be realized upon. There was no preceding distrust apparent, but a steady withdrawal of deposits on account of the prevailing financial stringency. The assets are $255,000 in money, notes, county securities, and real estate, the liabilities $205,000, of which $174,000 is deposits. General confidence is expressed that the concern will be able to resume business shortly. The First National bank kept its doors open until 6 o'clock.

Still Another Failure.

Special to the JOURNAL.

SIOUX CITY, Ia., June 10.—The Union Stock Yards bank filed an assignment this morning. The assets are placed at $432,667 and liabilities at $163,140. The bank was capitalized at $500,000. A clearing house committee which investigated the failure state it was due to loose methods of carrying on business, and will not affect anybody else in the city. The deposits are less than $50,000, and there is no possibility of any loss to depositors.

THE KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS.
Adjournment of the Grand Lodge—Yesterday's Street Parade—Last Night's Banquet—Details of the Occasion.

The following is taken from last evening's Virginia Chronicle:

The Grand Lodge of the Knights of Pythias, which had been in session in this city during the past two days, after the installation of the newly-elected officers and the transaction of some miscellaneous business, adjourned yesterday afternoon, to meet in Reno on the second Thursday of June next year.

THE STREET PARADE.

Shortly after the adjournment of the Grand Lodge the street parade took place from Pythian Castle up B to Taylor, down Taylor to C, up C to the junction of C and B. Then the line countermarched down C to Sutton avenue up to B and to the hall, where the members were dismissed.

The procession was headed by the Silver State band in full uniform, followed by Reno Division No. 2, Uniform rank, 20 strong, commanded by Sir Knight Captain S. J. Hodgkinson. Then came Comstock Division No. 3, with a total of 30, rank and file, under command of Sir Knight Captain M. C. McMillan. Following the uniform rank were the Grand Lodge officers, Representatives, and members of local lodges.

The procession, though small, made a neat appearance, and was viewed by many spectators along the line of march.

HALL DECORATIONS.

The decorating of the hall was in the hands of a special committee of local Knights, under whose efforts it was transformed into a bower of loveliness. The tables were arranged in a double triangle, with a seating capacity of 250, and occupied the entire floor of the main hall. Suspended in front of the stage was a triangle, fringed with numberless gas jets; the inside of the triangle contained the colors of the Order—red, yellow and blue, while in the center was the monogram, "F. C. B." The letters ablaze with innumerable jets. Pendant from the top of the stage were the banners of the Order. The stage was beautifully decorated with flowers and bric-a-brac. The gallery was skirted with varicolored bunting, while streamers of tri-color hung in festoons from the chandeliers in the center of the hall, and were looped on the balcony surrounding.

LAST NIGHT'S BANQUET.

In the evening a grand banquet was given at the Opera House by the local lodges to the Grand Lodge. The getting up of the spread was placed in the hands of Pythian Sisters of Silver Temple No. 2 of this city, and right royally did the fair ladies perform their part. The tables were fairly loaded with good things to supply the inner man (and woman, too), and the way the Knights from abroad tucked away the turkeys, salads, ham sandwiches, and other choice edibles under their vests, proved that the efforts of the ladies to please were appreciated. The gurgle of the hot coffee and the claret wine down the many throats proved a pleasant sound, and all went merrily as a wedding bell. Under each plate was laid a neat souvenir of the occasion, and at the side a buttonhole of choice flowers.

THE ONSLAUGHT ON DANTES.

The Knights, with their guests, assembled at Pythian Hall, and shortly after 8 o'clock, in double file, took up the line of march to the Opera House. As the procession filed into the hall the Silver State band, ensconced in the east end of the gallery, struck up a march. When the tables were filled by a portion of the multitude present another piece was played by the band, after which President McMillan posed the toast of the evening—"Eat" and every one fell to with a will.

After the appetites of those at the tables had been in a measure appeased the President announced the first number of the programme as printed—Toast: "Our Guests," which was responded to by Major Huffaker, in words of welcome to the visiting Knights.

The remainder of the programme was carried out to the letter, all taking part doing extremely well. The musical portion was composed of choice songs, solos, quartettes, vocal duets and instrumental pieces. The best talent on the programme was vociferously applauded and encored. The responses to the various toasts by the brother Knights proved a literary treat highly enjoyed by the assembled audience.

Owing to the length of the programme, and the fact of all having done so well, it is perhaps better not to particularize each number. Suffice it to say, the visiting Knights were highly pleased with the entertainment in every particular, and in regard to the banquet, as C. C. Powning remarked: "If the spread was a sample of Comstock want, visiting Knights were in no danger of present need."

The Pythian Sisters of Silver Temple were eulogized by W. D. Jones of Austin, who responded to the toast: "Pythian wives, daughters, sisters, and sweethearts," for the manifest success attained by them in getting up the banquet. Mr. Jones said the ladies were the corner-stone of Knighthood, the pillars of the organization, and but for them the male members would not be in it. Until midnight were the festivities of the occasion kept up, when the band played "Home, Sweet Home," and all departed, the visiting Knights loth to leave their Comstock brethren, and retaining a grateful remembrance of the evening's enjoyment.
